Legislative balk stalls SIU construction plans

By Matt Coulter
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

At least five construction projects on campus have been stalled by the Illinois Legislature's refusal to approve additional bond sales by the Illinois Capital Development Board (CDB).

The CDB sells bonds to accumulate funds for state construction projects which have been previously approved by the legislature.

Appropriations for the campus construction projects are included in SIU's collected from previous bond sales, Isbell said.

"The only thing we can say for sure is that the bond sale cut-off will be very troublesome," Isbell added. "CDB will not have money to fund all the projects."

The 1976-77 SIU-C budget approves about $3.8 million for five projects:

- $2.2 million for rehabilitation of Parkinson Laboratory;

- $1 million for remodeling of Davies Gymnasium;

- $200,000 to expand SIU's computerized energy conservation system;

- $184,000 to continue planning for permanent Law School facilities;

- $159,000 for installation of pollution control equipment ordered by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) for the power plant.

Should SIU receive only part of the $3.8 million, first priority for the funds would be the pollution control installation, according to Clarence Dougherty, director of campus services.

Dougherty said the EPA could close down the power plant if the pollution control improvements are not made.

Second priority would go to the Law School planning, Dougherty said. These funds are needed to help the Law School receive full accreditation, he explained.

SIU might lose federal aid money if remodeling of Davies Gymnasium is not completed, so this is also an important project, Dougherty commented.

Davies Gymnasium is used for women's physical education. Federal law requires federally funded institutions to offer equal facilities for men's and women's physical education.

Without remodeling, Davies could fail to meet federal guidelines for equal facilities and SIU might lose some federal funding, Dougherty said.

Isbell said the bond cut-off occurred because "the minority in the legislature—the Republicans this year—said Illinois didn't have enough tax money coming in to cover retirement of the bonds." Retirement of the bonds is guaranteed by tax revenue.

These legislators feared Illinois would be thrust into a situation similar to that of New York City—not having the money to pay off debts, Isbell said.

Budget signed

Governor Daniel Walker signed the SIU budget Tuesday after cutting about $4 million from the $108.7 million figure which had been approved by the legislature.

Walker sliced $2.9 million from the $68.4 million which had been scheduled for salaries, and vetoed an amendment which appropriated $750,000 for Medical School expansion.

SIU requested $118.2 million for 1976-77. The budget Walker approved is 88 per cent of the amount SIU requested, and 96 per cent of the amount approved by the legislature.

SIU had requested a 23.2 per cent increase in its budget for 1976-77, the largest increase sought by any of the four university systems in Illinois.

1976-77 budget passed by the legislature.

Gov. Daniel Walker signed the budget Tuesday, but it was not learned whether he approved the provision which would allow construction appropriations to be taken from existing CDB funds.

Regardless of Walker's action, CDB will not have funds to cover all the appropriations that have been approved by the legislature, according to Dean Isbell, financial officer for the SIU Board of Trustees.

CDB might be able to fund some of the projects with unappropriated money

Carter denies veep choice limited to two

NEW YORK (AP)—At the biggest show off Broadway, Democratic performers presented Jimmy Carter's platform Tuesday night and denounced Republicans as vote-happy modern Tories, while the nominee-to-be considered a vice presidential choice to complete his campaign cast.

A Democratic congressional leader reported, and a Carter spokesman denied, that the former Georgia governor had decided that either Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine or Sen.

Walter F. Mondale of Minnesota would be his running mate.

Carter's press secretary, Jody Powell, said the list of vice presidential prospects is still six senators long. That stirred skepticism, but Powell insisted it was so. He said the field will not be narrowed until late Wednesday, that Carter will then speak to all six prospects, and that the decision will be announced Thursday morning.

When platform time came, it was a show, not a debate—a succession of speeches by party leaders: on each section of the document.

The platform promises "every responsible effort" to reduce adult unemployment to 3 per cent in four years. The wording was worked out in consultation with agents of the apparent nominee, Jimmy Carter, who objected to more sweeping commitments. It also proposes "an orderly beginning" to federal programs of national health insurance and minimum income guarantees.

Reflecting a major Carter issue, the document also calls for budgetary and other reforms that would bring government agencies and programs up for review to determine if they should be ended, merged or changed.

Opponents of the platform provision on abortion mounted an eleven-hour effort to eliminate or modify it, or at least bring it to the convention floor for discussion. The odds against their success were formidable.

Donow: bargaining ruling not a blow to hopes

By Dan Hofmann
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A recent Supreme Court decision ruling out a federal collective bargaining law for employees of state and local governments, including faculty members at public colleges, has not dealt a severe blow to unionization hopes, Herbert Donow, president of the Carbondale Federation of University Teachers (CFUT), said Tuesday.

Donow said bills concerning federal collective bargaining legislation has been introduced to both houses of Congress, but may not have been under active consideration by legislators.

"I don't think anybody had any serious expectations on a (federal) collective bargaining bill. It was politically a very difficult thing to accomplish," Donow said.

Donow said the CFUT's parent organization, the American Federation of Teachers (AFT), had not lobbied strongly for federal collective bargaining legislation. "You don't pour out a lot of money if it isn't going to do a lot."

Donow said the AFT has concentrated its collective bargaining legislation efforts on the state level. He said the AFT is more concerned with the funding aspect of federally legislated programs for elementary and secondary education.

He said the AFT is lobbying for an amendment to the Illinois Constitution which would prevent court injunctions against striking employees in the public sector.

He said although there was not much of a chance teachers at four-year colleges would strike, the right is essential to collective bargaining.

"If a union is prohibited from having a strike, its bargaining power is severely limited from the outset," said Donow. He said without a right to strike, faculty unions would have to accept poor contracts or be forced to strike illegally.

Donow said collective bargaining legislation is not essential to faculty unions. "The best unions have survived and flourished with or without the law," said Donow.

"I'd prefer to be able to reach all the people of this campus and show them a union is necessary for their benefit," said Donow.

Symposium on Korea discusses Carter policy

By Scott Singleton
Student Writer

Jimmy Carter's election as president this fall could force South Korean President Chung Hee Park to end repressive measures against dissidents, a political scientist told a symposium on Asian international relations Tuesday.

Soon Sung Cho, political science professor at the University of Missouri, said an advisor to Carter has indicated that U.S. economic and military assistance to South Korea may be contingent upon liberalization of that regime.

However, Cho anticipates no change in the status quo if either President Ford or Ronald Reagan should win the presidential election in November.

Cho said Carter has stated his intention to withdraw all U.S. forces from South Korea by 1980.

However, the other symposium speaker, Sung Ki Kim, believes that if elected, Carter would not chance creating a power vacuum by withdrawing U.S. forces.

Kim, a professor of philosophy at SIU-E, said that despite America's disillusionment following the Vietnam war, "your country is not so naive as to completely withdraw from Asia."

The South Korean government claims it will be militarily self-sufficient by 1981, but Cho said he doubts this is true. He expressed concern over the psychological impact of American withdrawal.

"Carter has already gone on record as favoring complete nuclear disarmament and his brain trust has said the use of nuclear weapons is not possible, so does the bomb become the paper tiger the North Korean president says it is?" Cho asked.

"Kim said the South Korean government is desperately trying to obtain nuclear materials and hopes to have the capacity to produce nuclear arms within five years."

The two observers also disagreed on the chances for reunification of the two Korea's.

Cho believes South Korea's best chance for a negotiated reunification will be in the next three or four years. After that he said, reunification will be impossible.

"The balance of power in Asia has shifted from a confrontation between the United States and communists to one between forces such as Japan, China, the United States and many smaller nations," he said. Cho said that once the various relationships harden, the opportunities for reunification will be gone.

Participants in the Korean Student Association symposium take time to discuss an issue, from left Ikua Cho, Sung Ki Kim, Soon Sung Cho and Frank

City limits zoning restrictions on builder

By Steve Hahn
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

After deleting a portion of a proposed annexation agreement, the City Council gave a Carbondale land developer the right to seek any zoning change he may wish for a 57-acre land tract he hopes to annex for residential use.

The council, acting Monday on an agreement prepared for William Budsluck the land developer, deleted a section which said, "Budsluck reserves the right to seek rezoning from the present agriculture zoning district to any other district at the time any future phase of annexation is considered by the city."

By striking that section, and agreeing to use the Budsluck annexation proposal instead of an agreement prepared by the city, the council limited the restrictions which could have been placed on the proposed annexation.

A corresponding portion of the agreement prepared by the city states, "Budsluck reserves the right to seek rezoning from the present agriculture zoning district to any other residential district at the time any future phase of annexation is considered by the city. (Budsluck also) agrees that any such rezoning request will be limited to (only residential districts).

Concerns that Budsluck could now use the land for commercial development were raised at the hearing. The City Council, however, would have to approve any zoning changes allowing commercial or other use.

The council first discussed the proposed annexation, which would encompass land directly north of Chautauqua Road and east of Tower Road on Carbondale's southwest side, at an informal meeting on June 14. At that time Mayor Neal Eckert directed city staff members to prepare an annexation agreement.

The council also agreed to prohibit public or private streets or driveways from having direct access to Chautauqua Road from the proposed annexation. Budsluck originally wanted the council to allow access for homes which might face the road.

Bill Boyd, director of public works and James Rayfield, director of city planning, both said private access would cause serious safety problems because Chautauqua Road would eventually be made into a main thoroughfare.

In action at a City Council meeting following the public hearing, the council approved a building site plan, blueprinting five proposed parking lots at Carbondale Memorial Hospital, a lease agreement, placing the hospital's property under city control, a parking lot permit, allowing the hospital to use the lots once they are built; a financial note, enabling city funding of the project and a city ordinance making all the city transactions with the hospital legal.

The council agreed several weeks ago to help finance the parking lots by charging the hospital a low interest rate for the use of city funds.

Several homeowners who live near the site of the proposed parking lots, however, have filed a lawsuit against the city and the hospital which may force the repeal of any action taken to promote the project.

The homeowners claim the parking lots will destroy the residential atmosphere of their neighborhood. One specific point, which they object to is the city's cutting of an elm tree which they say may be 100 years old.

Tom Jones, SIU student body president, recommended Dennis Adamczyk, a special major, for the student position on the Carbondale Liquor Advisory Board. The council approved the recommendation for a one-year term which began July 1, 1976.

Leftists predict Soviet war action

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—Leftist Lebanese Moslems claimed on Tuesday the Soviet Union was getting ready for "urgent action" to prevent the defeat of the leftist and Palestinian side by Christians and Syrian troops in the Lebanese civil war. Syrian troops with tanks were reported to have stormed the town of Baabek, site of impressive Roman ruins 24 miles northeast of Beirut. The Moslems' Beirut radio said Alexander Soldatov, the Soviet ambassador to Lebanon, conveyed the Kremlin decision to Palestinian chief Yasser Arafat and Kamal Jumblatt, the Lebanese leftist warlord. It did not say what kind of action was contemplated.

Navy denies spy plane accusation

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP)—The presence of a U.S. Navy plane in Kenya prompted diplomatic reports Tuesday that it is flying reconnaissance missions to survey a reported military buildup in neighboring Uganda. But in Washington the Defense Department denied that the four-engine P3 patrol plane had flown along the Kenya-Uganda border and said the stop in Kenya was only to give the crew a rest after a long over-water flight. A Pentagon spokesman said, "The only flying it does is when it arrives at Nairobi and when it leaves." Diplomats in Nairobi said the plane was flying along the Kenya-Uganda border after arriving here Saturday from the American military base on the Indian Ocean island of Diego Garcia.

Poll shows farmers favor Thompson

CHICAGO (AP)—A recent poll of Illinois farmers showed James R. Thompson, Republican gubernatorial nominee, leading his opponent Michael J. Howlett by a healthy margin. Queried by Prairie Farmer magazine, 53.3 per cent of some 500 farmers in 36 downstate counties favored Thompson over Howlett, who received 19.4 per cent in the survey. Undecided were 27.3 per cent.

Police seek parents of kidnap victim

A 23-month-old Colp, Ill., boy kidnapped last week and recovered in Pontiac, Mich., is still being held in a children's home in Michigan waiting for his parents to pick him up, the FBI said.

Agent Jeff Maynard said the FBI has been trying without success to contact the boy's parents, James and Donna Paulin.

The Paulins are separated, with the father living in Colp and his mother's whereabouts unknown, authorities said.

Accused of the boy's kidnapping is Betty Ann Belt, 36, of Pontiac, who allegedly took Albert Edward Paulin III from his father's trailer July 6 out of spite when James Paulin refused to rekindle a romance with her, the FBI said. The child was recovered unharmed and Belt remains in custody.

Probe continues into slaying

Police investigators are interviewing friends and acquaintances of Kathleen McSharry in both Carbondale and Chicago trying to determine who murdered the 24-year-old SIU student. Police Chief George Kennedy said Tuesday, McSharry is from Chicago.

McSharry's nude body was discovered early Monday morning in her bedroom at 521 N. Allyn St. by her roommate, Christine Pretkel. Pretkel had spent the weekend away as did Michael McCann, who occupies a room in the basement of the house.

Jackson County Coroner Don Ragsdale said an autopsy attributed the cause of death to "about 10" stab wounds, one of which penetrated McSharry's heart. The knife used in the slaying was four to six inches long, Ragsdale said. He said there were similarities between McSharry's wounds and those of Theresa Clark, a 22-year-old SIU graduate student whose nude body was discovered in her apartment January 27, 1975. Clark's murder remains unsolved.

A pathologist's report due later in the week may determine whether McSharry was sexually molested, Ragsdale said. Authorities determined that Theresa Clark was not molested.

Kennedy acknowledged the possibility that the two murders might be connected. He said evidence pointing in that direction "will definitely be checked out."

She is survived by her parents, Hugh and Nancy McSharry, a sister, Anne Marie Gruszka and a brother, Thomas McSharry.

Visitation will be Wednesday and Thursday at the Sheehy Funeral Parlor, 4850 W. 79th St. in Burbank. Burial will be at St. Mary's Cemetery, 87th and Hamlin Avenue in Evergreen Park, a Chicago suburb.

Beg your pardon

It was incorrectly stated in Tuesday's Daily Egyptian that Len Swenson, the former election commissioner, had placed three East Side candidates on the West Side ballot. The story on the voiding of the East Side election should have read that when the list of senators was drawn up, three of the carry-over senators from the East Side were placed on the West Side sheet.

Opinion & Commentary

EDITORIAL POLICY—The general policy of the Daily Egyptian is to provide an open forum for discussion of issues and ideas. Opinions expressed on the editorial pages do not necessarily reflect those of the administration or any department of the University. Signed editorials represent the opinions of the authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Committee, which is composed of the student editor-in-chief, the editorial page editor, a member elected by the student news staff, the managing editor and an editorial writing instructor.

LETTERS POLICY—Letters to the editor are invited and writers may submit them by mail or in person to Editorial Page Editor, Daily Egyptian, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and should not exceed 250 words. Letters which the editors consider libelous or in poor taste will not be published. All letters must be signed by the authors. Students must identify themselves by classification and major, faculty members by department and rank, non-academic staff members by department and position. Writers submitting letters by mail should include addresses and telephone numbers for verification of authorship. Letters for which verification cannot be made will not be published.

Veep selection has Catch-22

By Arthur Hoppe

Jimmy Carter has been interviewing Vice Presidential hopefuls both in New York and in Plains, Georgia, for the past ten days. This is an extraordinarily difficult position to fill due to the nature of the job—as this transcript of a conversation between two unidentified persons may perhaps make clear.

"Welcome, Senator. It's mighty nice of you to come all the way down to my peanut farm here for this little old job interview."

"Well, Governor, I saw your want ad—"Veep, No experience necessary"—and as I happened to be passing by . . .

"I see on your application form, Senator, under 'Reason for Desiring Job' that you want to preside over the Senate a couple of times a year."

"That's right, Governor. And, modestly aside, I think I'd be just the man to carry out my official duty of gaveling for order. Look at the size of my wrist. I built it up smashing walnuts."

"Very impressive, Senator. But as I told the press, I expect my Vice President to handle a wide range of major responsibilities. So let's talk about your job skills. Can you welcome?"

"Yes, I can touch welcome without looking. In fact, I can welcome 32 Girl Scouts per minute with only three mistakes."

"Not bad. Do you take dictation?"

"Beg your pardon?"

"Let me put it this way: If I told you to run over your grandmother with a truck, what would you say?"

"How many times?"

"Very good. Then, of course, the job description includes flag raising, ribbon cutting, cornerstone laying and plugging in the coffee pot for State dinners."

"You can count on me, sir, to leave no cornerstone unlaied."

"And in foreign affairs, Senator, you'll be expected to deliver personal messages from me to leaders in other lands around the world."

"Oh, I think I can handle that. I'd just knock on the door of the palace or whatever and say, 'Here, King, you got a note from the President. And how's the missus today?' Should I wait for an answer?"

"No, they never say anything important. By the way, are there any skeletons in your closets? Have you been bought and sold by any building contractors lately or ever suffered a serious mental illness?"

"Just the routine illegal contributions from the oil companies and the usual childhood neuroses, sir."

"Lastly, will you be ready to take over the burdens of my office in the event of a grave national tragedy?"

"Ready? You bet your boots! I'm ready now! Wow-ee! I can hardly wait!"

"You don't have to be THAT ready. But I must say you're fully qualified for the job, Senator. Do you want it?"

"Do I ever? You're darned tooting I do!"

"Then I'm sorry, but you can't have it."

"But if I'm qualified and I want the job . . ."

"That's just it, Senator. Anybody who'd want this job is obviously not fit for high office."

Olympic Games should be disbanded

By Sue Greene
Student Writer

On July 17, the Olympic torch will be lighted and the 21st Olympic Games will begin in Montreal. Unfortunately, the games have already become another political showcase.

The Canadian government, reacting to Peking's demands, has recently stated that Taiwan's athletes will be allowed in Canada only upon agreement to drop the title 'Republic of China'.

The Canadian government's move has reinforced the question of modern Olympic Game feasibility. It's time to admit that today's complex countries are incapable of competing in an international festival of peace and friendship, the principle upon which the games were re-established. Racism, nationalism, the question of professionalism and soaring costs permeate the outward gala affair.

The Canadian incident is only one of the political moves that have been made throughout the Olympics. Arab terrorists attacked and killed Israeli athletes at Munich '72. Less dramatically, East Germany used its first appearance in the '72 games to signify its political maturity as did the Cubans. The China question was present in Melbourne in '56 when the People's Republic of China walked out before the competition began because the International Olympic Committee (IOC) also recognized the Taiwan delegation.

Racism was the subject of controversy at Mexico City in '68. Forty countries threatened to boycott the Olympics if South African athletes were allowed to compete. Avery Brundage, then president of the IOC, was persuaded to ban South Africa because of its racist policies and the games were eventually held.

During each Olympic session the question of professionalism surfaces. According to IOC, an athlete is ineligible for amateur status if he has received more than $50 for his skill or involvement in related areas. Countries like the U.S.S.R. whose athletes are on governmental payrolls while in training are subjects of public controversy and scrutiny each time the games are held.

Costs involved with staging the event have increased so much that Colorado backed out of hosting the '76 winter games. Competition was finally held at Innsbruck, Austria.

Montreal has had a real financial headache with the upcoming summer games. Jean Drapeau, mayor of Montreal, estimated it would cost $2.5 million to hold the Olympics. In mid-November, the Canadian government rushed to appropriate funds after it became apparent the costs would equal at least $1.2 billion.

The original Olympics were founded to promote peace among the turbulent city-states of ancient Greece. The modern Olympic Games have failed to achieve this goal. Instead, several of the Olympic stadiums have served as an arena for political moves and counter-moves. The philosophy of the Olympic Games is highly commendable, but the ideology appears only on paper. Issues like racism and professionalism surface but are dealt with indirectly by the IOC. And cities go in debt financing this folly.

The Olympic Games should be disbanded rather than serve as a political playground. Amateurs would be forfeiting the large meet, but true competition would survive and live on in grace instead of the side show status it now holds during the Olympic Games.

Cranston bill could hurt minorities

To the Daily Egyptian:

I am not surprised that your paper has endorsed the Cranston Amendment, favoring student control of activity fees. It seems like a nice, democratic notion. Yet I'm surprised that no one has mentioned its fascistic potentials.

Under the conditions of the bill, 50 per cent of the student body would have to agree on the validity of any campus activity or group funded by activity fees. What makes you think that kind of consensus is easy to get? If you've ever been kind to a student government meeting around budget time, you would have to have noticed the inter-group fighting, the earnest efforts of one group to destroy the funding for others. For example, do you honestly believe that 50 per cent of this campus would vote to fund activities by the Black Togetherness Organization? Or the Iranian Students Association? Or the Strategic Games Society? Or any of the other minority or special interest groups on campus? Where is a quorum to be found?

If a Cranston Amendment goes into effect on a campus the results will be the suppression of minority interests, the funding only of bland and inoffensive activities that meet with the approval of the majority. Democracy can only work when the varied facets of its citizenship take an intelligent interest in each other and that just isn't happening here at SIU.

Officials seeking school crime solution

By Richard Carelli
By Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—The nation's public schools, plagued by crime and vandalism of staggering proportion, soon will ask Congress for $300 million to escalate what has been a losing battle, security officials said Tuesday.

"We're talking about violence of the type never before experienced by schools and property losses in public schools of more than $600 million in 1975 alone," said Lucius Burton, security chief for the Alexandria, Va., school system. "The federal government has a definite role here."

More than 300 security experts and school superintendents from 30 states are meeting in suburban Alexandria this week to discuss, in a conference sponsored by the National Association of School Security Directors, new ways of combatting school crime.

But more money is seen as the ultimate weapon.

"Many of the school systems hit by student crime, arson, vandalism and burglary can't afford to handle the problem," association President Joseph Grealy of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., said in an interview. "We need more federal money for training and hardware."

Grealy said that security officials this week are considering all sizes of school systems, "drawing up programs to fit a school system of that size—but many systems just don't have the money to implement the programs."

Congress already has heard about the growing problem of school violence.

After hearing testimony by students and educators last summer of gangs shooting up classrooms, teachers assaulted and extortions carried out by fourth-graders, Congress asked the Justice Department's Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA) to help wipe out such crimes.

The LEAA, participating in this week's sessions, has pledged a $12 million program to eliminate such violence.

"We think we'll get congressional backing, although there may be some revision on the money figure," Burton said of the planned request. "Our main concern has been a presidential veto."

With statistics not yet compiled for 1975, Burton pointed to 1974 figures which showed $594 million in public school property losses:

- $102 million lost to vandalism.
- $243 million lost to burglary.
- $109 million lost to arson.
- $140 million in other losses, including locker thefts.

All's not pomp and politics

Real people make up a convention

NEW YORK (AP)—Something strange happens to people when they go into a hall all decked out for a political convention. Suddenly, everybody is an instant extrovert.

A man in carpenter's clothes walks up to the microphone hard by the sign that marks the Idaho delegation.

"The state of Idaho casts its votes for French Fries," he cries out in the unmistakable accent of New York.

There is a reply from another microphone: "I'll settle for the tomatoes."

"I'm a delegate from Texas, where do I park my horse?" says another.

A girl of 20 shyly steps up to the podium where Jimmy Carter and guess-who on Thursday will say "I accept your nomination."

The temptation is too much. "I accept your nomination," she says. Her girlfriend takes her picture as she waves at the imaginary delegates assembled.

Madison Square Garden was ready for the Democratic National Convention.

Never mind that the only drama expected in these four days is the selection of somebody to run with Carter in November. This palace of hockey, basketball and boxing had the look and excitement of every one of its 36 predecessors.

The bunting was up, the state signs were in place and everything was colored either red, white and blue—especially fitting in this Bicentennial year.

While Peter Duchin's band rehearsed the obligatory "Happy Days Are Here Again," Sen. John Glenn of Ohio stepped up to the podium to look over the hall.

America's first man to orbit the earth wasn't just posturing, however. He is one of the keynoters opening the convention and he may be the one who mounts the rostrum again later in the week to say for real: "I accept your nomination" for vice president.

Another who looked over Madison Square Garden was Joseph McNamara, chief of police in Kansas City, here to see how they do it in the Big Apple. Next month, he'll have similar crowd and security problems—except that the Republican National Convention will be held in the stockyards area of Kansas City while this one is in the heart of midtown Manhattan.

The television viewer will see a much more intimate auditorium than those of the last several conventions.

In Madison Square Garden not all the delegations can be accommodated on the main floor. By luck of the draw, the delegates from Texas, Michigan, Colorado, and California, find themselves in back, in the first tier of seats.

Those from Arizona, Iowa, New Hampshire are right up front. Alternates go into the second, third and fourth tiers. VIP's won't be anywhere near the floor.

The Democrats held their first national political convention in 1832 to nominate Andrew Jackson for president and Martin Van Buren for vice president.

WSIU will repeat big band era show

At 8 p.m. Monday, WSIU-TV, Channel 8, will repeat the popular big band show aired earlier this year.

Host of the program is veteran broadcaster Erv Coppi. The program, "It Seems To Me I've Heard That Song Before," features the music of the Big Bands of the 1940's as well as a look at old ballrooms of Southern Illinois including the popular White City Park of Herrin.

A group of local musicians, some of them veterans of the big bands, supplies the music. The group includes John Richard Small of Harrisburg, piano; SIU faculty musician Gene Stiman, a former member of the Benny Goodman band, on trombone; Phil Olson of SIU on trumpet; Arch Griffin, SIU, reeds; Mel Siener, SIU, bass; and Billy Joe King, Herrin, on drums.

The special will also feature a sequence of Jack Stalcup and his orchestra. The film was shot on location at the Casa Loma Ballroom in St. Louis and the Purple Crackle nightclub in Cape Girardeau.

Waste disposal called possible hazard

CANTON (AP)—An environmental impact study of the Chicago Metropolitan Sanitary District's Fulton County sludge disposal project concludes that it does have odor problems and at least the possibility of health hazards.

But the report also says the MSD Prairie Plan "if carefully and thoroughly monitored and evaluated as an experimental large scale prototype of strip-mine land reclamation, could help immensely to ensure environmentally sound recycling instead of burning and burying wastewater solids."

The preliminary report was drafted by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency as a first step in making the MSD project eligible for federal funds. A hearing on the study is scheduled for July 26 in Canton.

The sanitary district since 1971 has shipped treated liquid sewage as two hundred miles down the Illinois River to Fulton County, more than 60 per cent of which has been strip-mined.

Study may advance solar heat use

By Scott Singleton
Student Writer

With hopes that 75 percent of new housing will use solar heating by the year 2000, an associate professor in the Department of Thermal and Environmental Engineering will start a research project this fall that may help that goal.

Albert C. Kent, 42, of the School of Engineering and Technology, will test the durability of different types of plastic solar heat collectors to determine the long term effects of ultraviolet radiation.

"I think it's important to see how long these materials will last. If someone spends $4,000 for collectors, he doesn't want to replace them in five years," said Kent. The project is presently being funded by the University but he hopes to receive outside funding.

Of the different applications of solar energy (conversion into electricity, distillation of saltwater, refrigeration, space and water heating), Kent believes the one with quickest return is water heating.

"The basic equipment has been around for a long time, and there's not much improvement possible. By using solar energy to preheat water, and then using a regular heater, it's possible to have a 50 to 80 per cent savings," Kent said.

Kent is concerned with practical ways of conserving energy and would like more emphasis placed on the planning of new housing location and structure. To best use solar heating, window space should be at or below 20 percent of total surface area and windows and roofs should get southern exposure.

Kent said plans for the new Carbondale Federal Building include solar heating.

His main complaint with the way solar research has been conducted is that too much effort has been placed on developing high technology while "very little emphasis has been placed on integrating collector systems into the structural design of houses."

Because research funding has more than tripled in the last three years and the basic technology is fairly well developed, Kent does not see a need for large increases in funding levels. "You can only put so much money into an area before it becomes wasteful," he said.

Students to take theater into community

By Mary Bryant
Student Writer

How would you feel if you were walking through Thompson Woods and suddenly you began to hear the words of Ralph Waldo Emerson being read to you from atop a large rock?

This is the type of question that Robert Fish, assistant professor in the Speech Department, and his students consider as they make plans to take theater to the community.

Oral Interpretation Production, is a course currently being taught by Fish. The emphasis is on non-theatrical environments for theater productions.

"We will all experience together different environments where oral interpretation can take place," said Fish.

Fish's idea is to use an environment that will compliment the literature and also will get theater out among the people. He hopes that this more organic, less structured format will help develop a rapport between the performers and the audience that does not often exist in traditional theater. In this way the audience can react to the members instead of being separated by the structured theater.

"It's like the difference between eating at McDonald's and eating at Mary Lou's," Fish said.

Fish, who played the role of a colonial man at the Fourth of July Freedom Fest in Carbondale, believes that this kind of interaction between performer and audience can create a sense of community in people.

"I want to use theater as a tool to bring people back together," said Fish.

The class will cover all aspects of production including analysis of the performances and the relationship between the performers and the audience, Fish explained. The class will take shows to places such as Illinois Avenue and hiking trails in Giant City. Students will be able to perform in groups as well as individually.

"We have some real creative people in the class," said Fish. "I want to make this move." Fish said children are usually open to this kind of experience but that some adults may feel threatened by the lack of space between them and the performers.

"I don't want to threaten anyone," said Fish. "I think that adults can remember and re-experience what they felt as children through this kind of direct experience."

Contractors get business benefits from links with armed services

By Fred S. Hoffman
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — For as little as $450 a year, a defense contractor can legally derive business benefits from belonging to private organizations with links to the armed services.

By paying a fee to become a sustaining member or an associate of one or more of these organizations, a company can put its representatives in a position to cultivate contacts in the services.

The contractor can also participate in special seminars arranged by the military-oriented organizations to acquaint the defense business with service requirements for equipment. Generally, the armed services provide key officials to appear at such seminars.

An official of the Association of the United States Army (AUSA) said in an interview that one of that organization's functions is to serve as a bridge between the Army and sections of defense industry interested in meeting the Army's material needs.

All the major organizations of this sort — The AUSA, The Air Force Association (AFA) and the Navy League — deny that they serve to channel defense contracts to firms affiliated with them.

"We don't allow ourselves to get involved in specific contract matters," said a spokesman for the AFA.

The Defense Department takes a somewhat ambivalent position on relations with these organizations. Technically, they are private and legally unconnected with the Pentagon or the individual armed services, although many of their members are in regular uniform, in related reserve forces, or are drawing military retirement pay.

In a recent policy statement, assistant defense secretary William Greener spoke of "the important role of associations as a communication conduit between the Department of Defense and the industrial suppliers."

On the other hand, Greener has tried to enforce rules designed to insulate military officers and civilian officials from entertainment by defense contractors at conventions and other functions sponsored by the service-oriented organizations.

The AUSA, AFA, Navy League and Marine Corps League exist chiefly to promote the causes of the services to which they adhere.

They claim to get the bulk of their annual income from dues paid by individual members, from advertising in their magazines, and from insurance programs they provide for the membership. Most of this advertising, however, is sponsored by defense contractors.

These organizations work to develop grassroots support for the services through hundreds of local chapters, and they try to influence Congress through formal testimony and position papers. Most claim they do no direct lobbying on Capitol Hill.

The Air Force Association is the largest of the four, with 152,000 members in 286 chapters.

Rubin study was exploited by sensational publicity

This is the last in a three-part series examining Harris B. Rubin and his proposed sex-pot study. Parts I and II dealt with Rubin's previous research. Part III deals with the bureaucratic problems that have plagued Rubin's efforts to study marijuana's effect on sexual response.

The procedures and components Harris B. Rubin chose for the sex-pot were outgrowths of previous research that he has conducted on sexual response behavior. Marijuana was going to be used as a variable for checking its effect on human sexual response.

As proposed, the sex-pot research would include 60 paid male volunteers, at least 21-years-old. Before beginning the study they would be required to undergo psychological and physical examinations administered by trained investigators.

The volunteers, smoking and non-smoking, would not be told how the presence of erotic stimuli while using marijuana, and testing the hormone level when aroused or unaroused while using and not using marijuana.

The studies aimed at testing hormone level include studies for evaluating how sexual arousal effects hormonal levels and how hormonal levels effect sexual arousal.

Rubin, associate professor in the SIU School of Medicine, said, "The first part does not include adding hormones to the body but involves measuring the hormone level and determining if it has an effect on a person's ability to become sexually aroused."

"The second part," he added, "is the flipside. It determines if sexual arousal has any effect on the hormone level."

Previous studies with hormone levels have been conducted by other researchers. Some experiments have been done with marijuana's effect on hormone level. Rubin said he has a staff trained in hormone research to aide in the experiment.

In January 1973 Rubin and his colleagues at the SIU School of

The research "Effects of Alcohol on Human Sexual Responding" went to NIAAA where it was denied funding in November, 1974, because it was stated that the recommendations had not been closely enough followed. The research was later completed but the results have not been released.

Two scientists in January 1975 from the National Institute of Drug Abuse (NIDA) conducted a site visit after receiving the "Effects of Marijuana on Human Sexual Responding." NIDA funded the project in June with $49,500 in funds recommended for the first year and $39,800 for the second year. Rubin received approximately $61,000 which he used on research equipment, salaries, and equipment for training personnel.

In March, after a special review board composed of high ranking health department officials approved Rubin's study, the U.S. House of Representatives passed a bill prohibiting further funding to Rubin by the federal government.

On April 13 the U.S. Senate also passed the bill. Rubin returned funds he had not spent.

application for the necessary license in August.

Rubin became faced with three opposing groups; those who believed the study was immoral, those who wanted to see the funds spent elsewhere, and those who used the research for political publicity.

There were also several who defended Rubin's proposed research. Among his supporters were SIU's President Warren Brandt, SIU Faculty Senate, and the American Association of University Professors (AAUP).

Rubin plans to complete the research after writing the Justice Department for immunization for the participants and he plans to contact private institutions for funding.

Rubin, married and father of four children, is now leary of press coverage even though he believes his research is geared toward helping the people and should be made known.

In attempts to publicize themselves many people made accusations against Rubin personally and against his research. Many of the accusations were not backed with prior knowledge of his work. Perhaps if this had not been an election year or the press had not sensationalized his research none of this would of happened.

Rubin said the money spent to stop him greatly exceeded the $121,000 grant. Furthermore the bill Congress passed may be a precedent to inhibit research for unjustified political gain.

WRITING GRANTS

WASHINGTON (AP)—Some 400 books of poetry and fiction will be produced this year with grants from the Small Press Program of the National Endowment for the Arts. The grants total $345,460 and were made to 112 small independent printing presses in 26 states and the District of Columbia.

"The sex-pot research was needed to dispel myths concerning the effects of marijuana on sexual response."

much THC each marijuana cigarette contained while watching the erotic films because, Rubin said, they might react how they thought they should react.

Aided by nine investigators, including a physician who would administer the drug, Rubin said the sex-pot research was needed to dispel myths concerning the effects of marijuana on sexual response. Regulated under controlled conditions and using an electronic device attached to the genitals, marijuana's impact on the control of sexual arousal was going to be measured.

The three components of the research are: determining if marijuana has the ability to either inhibit or enhance arousal, determining if an individual can inhibit or enhance arousal by fantasy without Medicine submitted "Alcohol and Marijuana, Effects on Human Sex Arousal" to the National Institute of Health, (NIH) which was then channeled to the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism (NIAAA).

NIAAA conducted a site visit in July, 1973, to evaluate the proposal. In December they deferred making a definite decision pending compliance with their recommendations which primarily related to deleting studies that were too sensitive.

Without comprising the original proposal's integrity, Rubin decided to comply with the NIAAA concerns. He offered assurances that the research had been discussed with local media, clergy, and officials. He also submitted separate proposals for the marijuana and alcohol studies to NIH in May, 1974.

Since Rubin proposed working with the Schedule I drug marijuana, a drug which is a controlled substance that cannot be sold for therapeutic services, he made application to the Drug Enforcement Administration of the U.S. Department of Justice to be registered as a researcher authorized to employ the substance.

He received research approval from the state in March, 1975 and got federal approval next month.

Due to the sensationalized news coverage which began in July, 1975 it was suggested by the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) that he apply for a "grant of immunity from federal prosecution" and a "grant of confidentiality."

On September 5 Rubin received state immunity from the Illinois Departments of Mental Health and Law Enforcement. To enable appropriate findings from the Justice Department the Justice Department asked Health, Education, and Welfare (HEW) to determine Rubin's competence and qualifications as a researcher.

In January Rubin was awarded an "investigational new drug" exemption from the Food and Drug Administration. He had submitted

Student workers avoid lines, send checks directly to bank

Student workers will find their paychecks waiting for them in the bank a week from Friday if they applied July 7 for the option of having their paychecks mailed to their banks.

Controller Jack E. Simmons said the system is designed to eliminate long payday lines and to act as a convenience for student workers.

"We've had this option for faculty and staff for quite a while. In fact, a large percentage of faculty and staff do use this option, and we thought we could offer the service for students," said Simmons.

The checks will be mailed directly to the student's bank and deposit slips will be mailed back. Simmons said the checks would be in a student's bank account by payday, which is usually a Friday.

Simmons said approximately 20 students applied for the service the first day it was offered, but the Payroll Office said there has been a steady stream of applications coming in.

If a student applied this week for the service, the option would not be effective until two paychecks later. Simmons said students would have to pick up their first paycheck after applying, but would have the rest mailed to their bank.

Simmons said he hoped the popularity of the service picks up in the fall, explaining it would be a definite convenience for students.

Deposit authorization cards are now available for students when they apply for campus jobs. The cards are located in the Student Work and Financial Assistance Office, Woody Hall, Wing B, 3rd Floor.

Fireflies' fire more precious than gold

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The stuff that puts the lightning in lightning bugs, outshines the glimmer of gold.

Sigma Chemical Co. of St. Louis says a firefly extract of the compounds which make the insect incandescent fetches $20 a gram from scientists and others. That's $560 an ounce or nearly five times the price of the precious metal.

Youngsters in 15 eastern states, perhaps 1,500 in all, are helping the firm round up the curious creatures and lining their pockets with some shiny spare change.

"The fireflies contain two rare chemicals," said Richard Vogel, a Sigma official. "One is known as luciferase and the other is luciferin.

Both of these names are derived from the word Lucifer, meaning devil and fire and that sort of thing.

"When they come into contact with a chemical known as adenosine triphosphate-ATP they produce light. ATP is basic in every living cell or substance."

Cancer researchers are interested in the ATP content of diseased cells. An easy way to measure it is to introduce the firefly extract and measure the light that results. Water quality control scientists can determine bacteria levels by introducing the compound and gauging the light produced. And National Aeronautic and Space Administration scientists, among Sigma's customers, can use the stuff to help detect life beyond the planet.

"We just can't make enough to meet demand," Vogel said. "It takes 300 firefly tails to make a gram of luciferase-luciferin extract. Orders come from scientists throughout the world."

Each year the company processes about 3.7 million fireflies. It takes a week per batch but the process is simple enough for a college chemistry student. Sigma believes it's "the largest producer of the extract."

Enterprising youngsters from Nebraska to New York to Florida to Mississippi take to the field each year from May to August helping gather the bugs. Vogel said domesticated fireflies don't make enough of the chemicals.

Jerry Boschert, a youth specialist for the University of Missouri Extension Service, has coordinated firefly hunting in the Ste. Genevieve area for the past seven or eight years. About 200 kids, many of them from 4-H, joined this spring.

"In a good season they may rack up as many as 300,000," he said. "We're talking about maybe $3,000 in return for their efforts. If conditions are right and the bugs are really flying they do quite well."

Sigma supplies a brochure with complete information upon request.

Chicagoan found guilty of robbing man of $1

An 18-year-old Chicagoan was found guilty in Jackson County circuit court Tuesday for robbing a man of $1 at gunpoint.

Marvin Willis said he was in Carbondale to attend Kappa Kappa Gamma at the time the crime was committed on April 24.

State testimony given during the trial indicated that Willis accosted three men in front of Schneider Hall and demanded one dollar from one of them saying, "I could probably take more."

Witnesses testified that Willis asked for the money while holding a revolver concealed under a blue bandana.

SIU security officers testified that they picked up Willis and a friend of his and frisked them finding only some .38 caliber bullets on his friend.

The policemen said they brought them in for questioning and Willis confessed owning a snub-nose revolver and of stopping the persons, "for a $1 loan."

A search conducted by SIU police later turned up a .38 caliber Smith and Wesson snub-nose hand gun tucked into the back of the patrolcar the two were riding in.

During the jury deliberation Willis said he was planning to attend SIU as a business administration major once he finished high school.

Willis appeared before Judge Richard Richman. Sentencing is scheduled for August 16. Willis is now in the Jackson County Jail.

Permanent pacemaker tested, model runs on body energy

By Associated Press Writer

Conventional cardiac pacemakers, which depend on batteries for their energy, someday may be replaced by a permanent model, powered by the body's own energy.

Scientists at the University of Missouri-Columbia and Massachusetts General Hospital say the new system, if perfected, would eliminate the need for repeated and often costly surgery to replace the standard artificial batteries.

The new device is expected to cost no more than a conventional pacemaker, about $1,500, and would weigh about half as much.

Allen Hahn, a biomedical engineer at Missouri, says although the model probably won't be ready for human experimentation for another five years, animal tests have proven successful.

"I would say probably another set of long-term animal experiments is needed before human transplantation can be considered," Hahn said in a recent interview.

are being kept alive by artificial pacemakers attached to the walls of their hearts. The vast majority of those using pacemakers require additional surgery to replace worn out batteries.

The new device, called a hybrid bio galvanic cell, would eliminate the need for the second and sometimes third operation for battery replacement, Hahn said.

The principle behind the new pacemaker turns the body into a human battery. Two electrodes, one zinc and the other platinum, create a chemical reaction within the body.

The platinum reacts with the body's natural chemicals, which in turn cause oxygen to move from one electrode to the other. That movement creates electrical current.

Everyone has a natural pacemaker, an area of tissue in the upper right portion of the heart. When it fails to send impulses at consistent intervals and at sufficiently powerful levels, an artificial pacemaker is needed.

'Ladies of the night' complain about tight-fisted Democrats

NEW YORK (AP) — For months before the Democrats came to town, police and prosecutors tried to knock the city's sex industry off its platform heels. Now it turns out the Democrats are largely ignoring Gotham and Homorrah.

The topless bars are far from crowded. Trade at the massage parlors, which are only veiled bordelloes, is off.

And the streetwalkers — police guess there are 3,000 of them — say they're jittery about approaching "Johns" because too many policemen are on the street acting like lustful delegates.

Damon Runyon once tagged it "sinful Times Square," and if anything has changed since his day, it's only that the sinfulness ranges farther afield. Times Square has blocks of strip joints, porn movies, peep shows, gay follies, nude studios and even one establishment with the telling name "Pleasure Seekers Club."

And it's not just on the square. Police figure there are some 100 sex-for-sale shops in the flesh market that starts on the uptown side of Madison Square Garden and stretches for 15 blocks, mingling with fancy hotels and chipping away at New York's prized theater district.

All around the area, if not all around the town, business was said to be off. Around the Garden, the lads from the vice squad have scared away many of the streetwalkers. Farther away, there were fears of "delegates" who carry badges different from conventioners.

But the higher-priced prostitutes still work the hotel bars — like the lady in the purple dress at the Americana's Jockey Bar.

Looking to be in her 20s, she couldn't seem to slide onto barstools without brushing her knee against the guy next door. Then she landed a live one — he had silver hair, wore a string tie and used a cane.

And a bartender at the Americana, who asked to remain nameless, offered another view of unconventional pleasures: "When these convention guys come to town they bring phone numbers. The East Side is full of call girls, real classy."

Back at the more obvious haunts, the mood was less than gay.

"These Democrats are a weird bunch. They're staying away," said Michelle Andrews, a hostess at the "49er," a midtown spot where drinks cost $3 and the dancers wear little more than earrings.

"So where's the business?" complained Bruno Treet, manager-bouncer of a massage parlor just steps from Broadway. "We've had nothing but our steady customers."

Karen, a 22-year-old lady of the streets, says, "Who can work? The cops are busting everybody."

Police deny they've been sweeping up the local talent. But they are enforcing what on Sunday became New York's latest statute against the world's oldest profession.

The law makes it illegal to loiter for the purpose of prostitution and is aimed at both the gal and the guy. The burden of determining "purpose of prostitution" is left to the arresting officer.

Teaching aids to be exhibited by companies

The latest educational textbooks, teaching aids and materials will be shown by more than 60 companies at an educational materials exhibit Wednesday & Thursday in the Student Center.

Among the exhibitors will be textbook publishers, media equipment firms and suppliers of educational materials.

Last year the exhibit drew over 3,000 teachers, counselors, administrators and students from public and parochial schools, community colleges and universities, according to Lowell Hall of the Division of Continuing Education.

Door prizes will be given by the exhibitors, Hall said.

The exhibit is scheduled for 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Wednesday and 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. Thursday.

Student intends to farm despite handicaps

By Larry D. Jones
Graduate Student

The door swings open, and John Ford rolls silently into the room, a small cigar clamped tightly in a warm grin. He pulls smoothly alongside the desk and parks.

"Whatcha need?" A thick shock of dark hair flags characteristically over his brow.

"First the regular stuff. Age? '22." Weight? "175." Height? "Six feet." He hesitates. "Well —" He takes the cigar out of his grin. "four-eleven, now."

John was reared on a farm near Carman. To help locate the area, he quips, "The crows fly over from Burlington, Iowa."

He went to high school at Stronghurst. An athlete, he played football all four of his years there. Until midway through his senior year there was little doubt about his future.

He worked his grandfather's farm, rode his horse, thought his die was cast. It was a good life — secure, and there were no changes in the offing.

"I certainly didn't plan on going to college," he said.

Then a wild toboggan ride down an icy hill threatened his life, settled for his legs — and changed his plans.

Now John is completing work for a master's degree in poultry management and nutrition. He received a B.S. in Animal Industries from SIU School of Agriculture in 1975. He is the only individual to earn such a degree in a wheel chair.

John recently directed the modification of two poultry houses and a feeding station at the SIU poultry center. His object was to make it possible to operate the facilities from a wheel chair.

"In most cases it didn't take much," he said, "and once the necessary changes were made, they wouldn't inconvenience anyone."

The project was accompanied by a detailed report, complete with before-and-after photographs of John doing the work. The report included time and motion studies for each operation and compared the efficiency of working from a wheel chair with walking.

How did John become interested in poultry?

"Well, when I first came down here (to SIU), I had a run-in with a bull, and I figured, 'What the hell, a chicken won't stomp me in the ground.'"

John was advised against studying agriculture at all. "They (at DVR) wanted me to go into social welfare or rehab or something — they didn't think I could make it in agriculture," he said, then added "I'm not putting anything else down, but I'm a farmer."

He raises himself on his elbows, somehow manages to adjust the cushion under him.

"There were a few back at John Ford inspects a hen in one of the two laying houses modified at his direction for operation from a wheelchair.

Stronghurst that didn't even think I should try going to college. They didn't think I had the brains.

"I just had to prove they were wrong," he said.

No rancor in his voice — just determination.

John talks easily about the accident that paralyzed his legs.

"It happened Jan. 10, 1971," he says. "I'll never forget that date."

It was sunny and cold — a Sunday afternoon outing with the Methodist Youth Fellowship. A beautiful day, according to John, for sledding.

He reconstructs the scene in detail.

"We were on a long, steep hill, where you could really get up some speed. Most of the run was covered with ice."

"A guy dared me to ride a one-man toboggan down backwards," he recounts, then admits, "I've always been a sucker for a dare."

As he talks, a sort of far-away look settles on his face, as if a part of him were there again, on the hill.

"About half-way down, I knew I was in trouble, but before I could get off, the toboggan struck a tree root and went flying through the air, me along with it. I landed in a brush pile, astraddle a log, but still with the toboggan."

"I knew something was wrong — I couldn't feel anything in my legs. I was never unconscious. "My cousin had sense enough not to move me. He called an ambulance."

The ambulance never came.

"Finally, people on the hill carried me down on the toboggan," John said.

Hours later, John ended up at University Hospital in Iowa City, where doctors told him later that he would die if he weren't operated on within 24 hours.

"They gave me about one chance in three of surviving surgery and a 50-50 chance of walking if I did. I survived," he said.

Three months at University Hospital were followed by three months of rehabilitation at the Klein Memorial Hospital in Burlington, Iowa.

At Klein, John kept up with his school work.

"I wanted to finish high school — have that out of the way," he said.

"I graduated flat on my back."

That was in 1971. "I decided that if I was going to make it on my own, I had to have more education," John said, and the following fall, "I was at SIU."

His first year at college he met Nancy Loy. They were married in the summer of '74. Nancy is studying for a master's degree in special education.

"My wife is beautiful. She doesn't push me up hills. I'd rather do it myself," John said, all in the same breath.

Does that sound like pride talking?

Wrong.

"I've never had a power chair. It was always my thinking that I saved two arms out of the wreck. I ought to keep them as strong as possible," he said by way of explanation.

John is busy completing his master's thesis, which he says is still unofficially titled, "Energy Levels and Density Stress in Laying Hens," but already his eyes are on a Ph.D.

"There's money to be made in the poultry business, but I'd rather teach at a university. I think having a doctor's degree would give me a chance to call some of my own shots and the time to do some of the things I want to do," he said.

He still wants to raise horses.

Is it tough, taking care of business from a wheel chair?

"Sure," he said. "Things take a little longer — you have to work a little harder — but if you give me a little time, I can do about anything."

"The way I look at it, everybody's handicapped, one way or another, to some extent. Mine's just more noticeable."

He looks thoughtful, like he's hesitating to ask a favor.

"When you write the story, could you put something in for me?" he asks. "Could you say something about my family and friends — the people who have been behind me all the way. Without them, things could have gotten pretty hopeless."

He flips the hair out of his eyes, only to have it fall back again, then pivots and glides away.

Ali John Ford's stentch is not in his arms.

Not by a long shot.

Olympic Village, no pleasure palace

By Mark Edgar
Student Writer

MONTREAL—Although the cost of the Olympic Village has almost tripled following its inception two years ago, up to 12 athletes may be forced to live in apartments designed for three.

Since the apartments will have one bathroom, officials have urged athletes, to shower on the various sites after competition and training sessions, rather than in their rooms.

During the two-week Olympic Games, in fact, organizers are trying to squeeze more than 11,000 athletes and officials into facilities built to hold no more than 4,000.

Those in charge of accommodations at the Olympic Village blame the overcrowding on a miscalculation error. Earlier, officials estimated 9,600 would be the number attending, and not the present 11,000 plus figure.

Because of inflation and delays in construction of the 19-story pyramid structures, the original estimate of $30 million has soared to more than $85 million.

But in a statement attributed to Mayor Jean Drapeau, the plan to build a permanent village using private developers "wouldn't cost Montreal taxpayers a cent."

Now, it seems, the taxpayers will bear most of the burden of financing the 982 unit housing complex, and the city will lose $50 million when the apartments are converted to condominiums and rental housing, said one report.

Victor Goldbloom, a Quebec cabinet minister in charge of the Olympic Installations Board pushed for temporary buildings that could be moved after the Games. He has said to the press "the structures have cost too much now to be used as low cost housing."

Nevertheless, the designer of the apartments, Michel Dallaire, has called the furnishings humble. "One of the key aims was to furnish the athletes in a practical manner," Dallaire said.

Dallaire told reporters, during a tour

Hockey coach eyes national finals

"Philadelphia or bust, 1976" is posted in bright red letters above the desk of Julie Illner, women's field hockey coach at SIU.

For the first time in Southern's history, the Women's Field Hockey team has a chance of making it through the State and Regional Field Hockey contests, and continuing on to Philadelphia where the National Championships will be held.

Illner, the Field Hockey coach since 1969 explained that Illinois has never participated in the Regional or National Championship because there has never been a state-wide contest.

Eastern Illinois University at Charleston will host the State tournament, to be held Nov. 5-6. There are 11 teams signed up for the tournament out of an eligible 17 in the state. The teams will be divided into pools Illner explained. The teams will be narrowed to two teams

IOC conducts assembly on Taiwanese problem

MONTREAL (AP)—The International Olympic Committee went into a critical session Tuesday amid dwindling hopes that the Taiwanese would reconsider pulling out of the 1976 Games.

Philip O. Krumm, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, who has been seeking a compromise in a dispute between the Taiwanese and the Canadian government, said: "I don't think we are getting anywhere."

Canada, in the face of bitter criticism by the ICC, has refused entry to the Taiwanese athletes unless they promise not to use the name of the Republic of China or their national flag. The Taiwanese rejected the suggestion by the ICC Executive Board that they march under the Olympic flag in the opening parade, and said they would pull out altogether.

Canada has recognized the People's Republic of China and government officials have expressed fear that permitting the rival Taiwanese entry team would offend the People's Republic.

ICC sources said a lively debate was expected at the closed session. Several members were dissatisfied with the Executive Board's failure to wring censessions from the Canadian government.

In Washington, a spokesman for President Ford said it was "the American position, the White House position," that the ICC alone should decide which teams take part in the Games.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said: "The role of the host country is solely to provide facilities for the Games, and the host country should not stipulate political or other considerations for participation in the Games."

Asked again whether Ford would recommend an American boycott of the Games over the issue, Nessen said he would not "want to project that far ahead."

U.S. Sen. Barry Goldwater and The New York Times suggested that the United States reconsider its participation in the Games, but Douglas Roby, U.S. member of the ICC, said: "I don't think there is much chance of the U.S. team pulling out."

As the ICC went into session, African delegates meet in the same hotel to discuss a possible demand for a ban on New Zealand.

Carter, nation's celebrities choose favorite baseball feat

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—His mind is understandably on other things this week, but if you ask Jimmy Carter about his preferences in baseball's memorable moments competition, you'll notice a distinct Georgia bend about his answers.

The office of Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn did ask Democratic presidential front-runner Carter and several other celebrities how they'd vote in the bicentennial promotion that climaxed Tuesday with the announcement of the game's top moment and most memorable personality.

For his top moment, Carter chose Henry Aaron's record 715th home run hit April 8, 1974, when Aaron was with Atlanta. "No one believed Babe Ruth's record would ever be broken," said Carter.

The former Georgia governor chose Ty Cobb, the Georgia Peach, as the game's most memorable personality, calling him "a colorful figure on and off the field. He was one of the first superstars of the game."

Author James Michener thought Don Larsen's perfect game in the 1956 World Series should be the most memorable moment. Michener called the performance "a masterpiece unforgettable."

Joe DiMaggio's 56-game hitting streak got New York Gov. Hugh Carey's vote for the most memorable American League moment, a competition DiMaggio's performance captured last month. "Because of its duration, it typified the consistently brilliant career of one of baseball's greatest stylists," said Gov. Carey.

Sen. Henry "Scoop" Jackson of Washington and Congressman Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill of Massachusetts, House majority leader, agreed that Babe Ruth should be the most memorable personality.

said Illner, "we need to concentrate on going into this season and the state contest first."

"There is a great team feeling and effort among the team this year," Illner said. "It's made up of a 'hodge podge' of players and personalities. All of them are different, but have what it takes to make the team click on the field."

Peg O'Connell, Helen Meyer, Lisa Miller, and Pat Matreci, are all physical education majors except for Matreci, a journalism major, are four of the teams top returning players. Illner said although they are four of the top players, "without the rest of the team's efforts they wouldn't be where they are today."

Field Hockey's season begins at SIU on Aug. 22. Eighteen of SIU's players are attending summer camp in Brooklyn Mich. They will bring back new strategies and skills to strengthen the team.
